1. Package holidays, which include flights and hotel accommodation in the same booking, have been popular for several decades. Recently, however, a new type of package holiday has been introduced: the all-inclusive package. Many people are attracted by all-inclusive holidays because all meals, drinks, as well as flights and accommodation, are included in the price.
2. If you are going on a trip, follow this simple rule of packing. Get everything that you could possibly want to take with you ready. Then, when you've made a big pile, put half of it back. People always take too much with them when they travel. Carrying heavy bags is never fun, so don't take too much with you.
3. Bicycles are not just used for recreation. In Britain, thousands of postmen and women deliver the mail each day by bike as it's much quicker than walking. In American towns and cities with traffic problems, a bike is often the quickest way for a police to move around. At large airports in Germany, you can see airport workers riding around on bikes.

4. On long flights, it's important not to sit still for too long as this can be bad for your health. A good exercise for your hands is to press a tennis ball - ten or fifteen times. For your feet – take your shoes off and move your feet in different ways.
5. Not long ago, if you wanted to book a plane ticket or a package holiday, you had no choice – you had to go to a travel agent's. The Internet has changed that, and now flights and trips can be booked in the comfort of your own home. It's often cheaper, quicker and more convenient to book tickets online, but you do need a credit card.
6. Travelling can be dangerous because things can always be wrong. However, travelling is much safer than it was, say, fifty years ago. This is thanks to the thousands of men and women who have worked hard to improve safety, by inventing and developing things such as seatbelts and airbags, and making cars, planes, trains and ships stronger and safer.
